

Stresa, Italy: Caught in the Act

BILDERBERG 2004 ATTENDEES PHOTO GALLERY

Many luminaries of world's industry, finance and politics attended this year's Bilderberg meeting in the small resort town of Stresa, Italy. These are just a few of the 127 capitalists, politicians and power brokers who showed up in Italy. Attendee photographs are here identified by number: (1) Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates, one of the richest men in the world, attended with his wife in order to put his 2 (billion) cents in. (2) Washington Post CEO Donald Graham and Indra K. Nooyi, the president and chairman of PepsiCo, have a friendly chat following their arrival by helicopter. (3) High-powered attorney Vernon Jordan was there at Bilderberg yet again. (4) Neo-con Douglas Feith, undersecretary for policy in the Department of Defense, makes his way from the lobby of the Grand Hotel in Stresa. (5) Etienne Davignon, pipe-smoking Belgian banker and this year's honorary Bilderberg chairman, talks on a cell phone. (6) No surprise, accused war criminal Henry Kissinger is still a power player at Bilderberg. (7) Richard Holbrooke, a key aide to Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry and a former UN ambassador, also on his cell phone. (8) Hasan Cemal, a senior columnist with Turkey's popular Milliyet daily newspaper. (9) Bilderberg luminary David Rockefeller appears annoyed as he lifts his head from a bowl of soup at an outdoor cafe in the hotel. (10) Henri de Castries, the chairman of France's massive AXA Insurance company. (11) Martin Wolf, an associate editor at The Financial Times. (12) Richard Perle (far right), chief architect of the war in Iraq and now considered "on the outs" after the Iraq war blew up in America's face, laughs and talks with Vernon Jordan and other unidentified Bilderbergers. (13) An Italian journalist reads an Italian daily's front-page report on the Bilderberg meeting in Stresa. While the European press covered the gathering, the U.S. mainstream media all but ignored the important secret confab.
